NEW MAYOR TAKES HIS SEAT

"I Shall Enforce All Laws Equally." Says Grinstead.

DEMOCRATS GO OUT.

Big Crows of Citizens Greet Him In City Hall.

Louisville, Ky., Nov. 13.—James F. Grinstead became Mayor of Louisville at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The oath of office was administered by Judge Emmet Field, following which Mayor Grinstead made a brief speech to 300 people who had crowded into the council chamber at the City Hall, where the inaugural ceremonies were held. Robert W. Bingham, the retiring Mayor, was present during the first part of the inaugural ceremony. The moment Mr. Grinstead took the oath of office, however, thus taking unto himself the office of Mayor, Mr. Bingham left the Council chamber and thence the City Hall.

MURDER CHARGE

Will be Looked Into By the Grand Jury.

Chappel Hatchet, colored, was brought before Judge Breathitt last Tuesday on the charge of murdering his father. It is said that he killed his father by striking him with a stone. The court held Hatchet over to the next grand jury.

BIG CROWD JOLLY TIME.

Social Session Occasion of Very Much Merriment.

FIVE MADE SPEECHES.

Festivities Were Concluded At 11:30 After a Good Time.

The social session of the Elks Tuesday night was presided over by Col. Joust Henry and there was a round of fun from 8 to 11:30 o'clock. The collation was served in courses and the speaking program was carried along with the other "feast."

John C. Duffy was the first speaker and told "How it Happened," taking the late election as his theme. He injected much fun into a subject that is not regarded as very funny by the party to which Mr. Duffy belongs.

He was followed by Mr. T. C. Underwood with "The Story of Uriah." Mr. Underwood in his inimitable way discussed pretty much everything and everybody but Uriah. He wound up with one of Kipling's poems, which came very near to breaking up the meeting.

Mr. John Schrode, the new engineer at the City Light Co., billed as "The Professor," gave some sleight of hand tricks with cards and balls that would have done credit to a professional.

Chas. M. Meacham followed him with some "Incongruities and Desultory Observations," which filled

FEW WITNESSES ANSWER CALL

A Temporary Delay in Caleb Powers' Fourth Trial.

TACTICS ARE EMPLOYED

First Move is an Attempt to Have Pardon Recognized.

Georgetown, Ky., Nov. 12.—Because of the absence of about 100 witnesses of the 132 summoned by the commonwealth, a postponement of one day was granted yesterday by Special Judge John Morris in the fourth trial of Caleb Powers, which was called at Georgetown. The defense announced that it would urge a trial at this term of court. A new line of defense will be adopted, it is believed, and Powers' attorneys will attempt to show that Henry Youtsey not only concocted the conspiracy which led to the assassination of William Goebel, but fired the fatal shot himself.

Second Day.

The second day of the trial of Caleb Powers at Georgetown was consumed in disposing of preliminary motions. Judge John S. Morris declining to recognize the Taylor pardon and refusing to allow the defense to file a plea in abatement, though he permitted the defense to make an avowal which will be part of the record should the case be carried to the United States supreme court. The commonwealth announced its readiness to go into trial, but could not force an announcement from the defense, which is believed to be feeling out Judge Morris before deciding whether or not a trial is wanted at this time.

YOUNG OFFENDER

In Jail Waiting for an Execution.

Jim Edwards, a negro boy of thirteen, is in jail awaiting a trial before County Judge Breathitt, which has been set for tomorrow. The young negro does not bear an enviable reputation. He is said to be unmanageable and has made some threats of what he will do when he gets out of jail. He was arrested some time since on two charges of having stolen a diamond pin, a plain gold ring and other jewelry from the home of a South Main street citizen. He will in all probability be sent to the State school of reform.

PASSED AWAY AT AGE OF 88

Mrs. Sarah Gordon Buckner, Died Wednesday Morning.

BURIAL AT OAK GROVE.

Had a Paralytic Stroke Few Days Before Her Death.

In the passing of Mrs. Sarah A. Buckner, shortly after 12 o'clock yesterday morning, the city lost one of its oldest inhabitants.

Mrs. Buckner was the widow of the late Frank W. Buckner and was born in Christian county, December 2, 1819. Her father, Samuel Gordon, was a native of Virginia and died in 1852. She was married to Mr. Buckner in 1835, and bore him five children, namely: the late Mrs. Annie Woodridge, Samuel G. Harry C. and Upshaw, of this city, and William F. of Clarksville, Tenn.

The deceased was an invalid during the last twenty years of her life, never recovering entirely from an attack of inflammatory rheumatism. She lived the greater part of her life on the Buckner estate, near Oak Grove and rarely left home, as she was not able to get about without her crutch.

About four years ago she purchased the Redford homestead on South Virginia street and moved to the city. Mr. Harry Buckner and his two daughters making their home with and caring for her in her declining years. In early life she was united with the Baptist church.

A few days before her death she had a stroke of paralysis which affected one side, which, with the infirmities of old age, caused her death.

The remains will be taken to the family burying ground this morning for interment, near Oak Grove, at 11 o'clock. Services will be held at the grave, conducted by Rev. R. L. Baker, pastor of Salem church.

The Inauguration.

Several persons from Hopkinsville will witness the inauguration of Mr. Willson as governor. The event occurs early in December. There is plenty of time to get out your old swallow-tail coat and have it put in shape for the inaugural, that is if you receive an invitation.

LAST MEETING

Of the Old Council to be Held Friday Night.

The last meeting of the old Council will be held to-morrow night. Some important reports and settlements will be received and steps taken to turn over the city's business in good shape to the incoming council. Collector H. C. Moore has made an unusually close collection of 1907 taxes. He has collected 96 1/2 per cent of the white and 62 per cent of the colored property taxes, and 60 per cent of the white polls. Less than 25 per cent of the colored polls are paid and about 50 per cent of them are never paid.

Fined $25.

Banks Burress, of the Pembroke neighborhood, was before Judge Breathitt Tuesday on the charge of carrying concealed a deadly weapon. After hearing the evidence the court found Burress guilty and imposed on him a fine of $25 and ten days imprisonment in the county jail.

Married in Clarksville.

Clarksville, Tenn., Nov. 12.—Henry Mayberry and Mrs. M. E. Simmons, of Christian County, Ky., were united in marriage this morning at the court house by Squire Wiley Smith. They were accompanied by J. M. Gill and Miss Birdie Burke.

The Youth's Companion Calendar.

The publishers of the Youth's Companion will, as always at this season, present to every subscriber whose subscription ($1.75 is paid for 1908 a beautiful Calendar for the new year. Four paintings by artists of distinction are reproduced in the four panels of the Calendar by a process of color printing which has been recently brought to remarkable excellence. The first of the panels is an inspiring scene full of the beauty of the wide ocean and sky, and the joyous rush of the homeward bound ship. The second is a fine battle piece. The third pictures an old mill at Zaandam—typically Dutch in treatment. The fourth panel depicts a "Girl With Roses," a charming face, exquisite in color and expression. All the pictures are worthy of preservation long after 1908 has passed into the good old times.

THE OLD HOMESTEAD

By L. M. MONTGOMERY

(Copyright, by Joseph B. Sewell)

Stephen Winslow backed his horses down to the brook to drink before turning in at his gate, as had been his lifelong custom. To-day he felt tired, and even after the animals had lifted their heads from the water he still sat there, leaning back contentedly against the sacks of flour piled up behind him.

"I shouldn't wonder if I missed that brook," said Stephen, reflectively.

"When you've heard a thing for 60 odd years, it's apt to ring in your dreams, maybe."

Priscilla was a small, lean old man, half lost in loose clothes that seemed far too large for himself. His white beard combed into straggling locks by his nervous fingers, flowed in a patriarchal fashion over his breast. Presently he chirruped to his horses and they lumbered along through the water and up the steep little rise to the turn. As he drove through the open gate a woman came out of the house.

"Well, everything is about wound up at last, Priscilla," he said contentedly. "I went into Dan McCulloch's on my way to the mill and we made the dickers. He's rented the farm for a year. Leave, Priscilla, it makes me young again to think of it! Seems 'why we were starting out in life all over again, don't it, now?"

Priscilla smiled. "Maybe you'll be wanting to get back before you've lived long in Redmond," she said.

Stephen chuckled, as if at a joke. "That was all the talk at the store to-day. Peter Shackelford says, says: 'Winslow, you'll never be contented in city life. You'll be wild to get back here after next spring,' says he, Shackelford-like, as if he knew it all."

"I don't know that I care a great deal myself," said Priscilla, placidly. "But I'm tired of this lonesome life, too, now that the children have all gone. I'm sure of myself, but I'm not so sure of you, father. You are as full of enthusiasm as a boy over moving to the city, but perhaps you won't find it all you expect, and you may feel disappointed."

"No I won't, Priscilla," protested Stephen. "I thought it all out, tell you. There'll be no banking for Roseneath on my part. You'll more likely be homesick yourself."

Stephen and Priscilla Winslow had decided to sell or rent their farm and move to Redmond for the remainder of their days. Their three children were settled there and they wished to be near them. Gordon, the oldest, was president of the university. Besides the natural tie, there was a bond of intellectual comradeship between him and his mother, from whom he had inherited his most marked characteristics. Theodore, commonly called Ted, was a prominent Redmond lawyer, and Edith, who was the youngest, had recently been graduated from college and was the teacher of mathematics in the Redmond seminary.

By Christmas they were settled down.

"I'm glad it's finished," said Priscilla. "I've had enough of shopping and 'harmonizing.' I must say I like the result, though. Don't you, father?"

"Yes," piped Stephen, with alacrity. In his heart he was wondering if he would ever feel like anything but a visitor in this fine new house of his. But he would not say so to Priscilla. He was ashamed and alarmed to find that he was longing for Roseneath—"after all my bragging," he reflected, sheepishly. He grew more ashamed as the winter went by. He could not feel like anything but a stranger in the city. He missed his old cronies at the store. He had been wont to laugh at them, Priscilla, but he had in reality enjoyed his simple pre-eminence among them. He had been looked up to as a clever, well-read man. Now he was a "stranger" being nobody. Above all, Priscilla must never suspect it—Priscilla, who so evidently enjoyed the new life as fully as she had predicted.

When April came his homesickness grew worse. The spring air wakened in him a keen desire to get back to the farm and its old, homely ways. One day it overpowered him.

"Things'll be waking up in Roseneath by now," he thought. "These evenings the store'll be full. I could drop in! 'Spose Dan'll be getting ready to work the farm. Wonder what he'll put in the south hill field?—Tough to be wheat, but like as not he'll sow it with oats."

Presently Priscilla came in, flushed and bright-eyed. "Father," she said, abruptly, "do you think you can get along without me for a couple of days next week? The—The Mothers' council meets in St. Andrew's then, and I've been appointed one of the delegates."

"Think of that, now!" said Stephen, admiringly. "Of course you must go. I'll be all right. I'll be as jolly as a sand-boy."

"If I go I will leave here Tuesday morning and not be back until Wednesday evening. Why, father, what's the matter?"

Stephen sat bolt upright with an exclamation.

"Nothing, nothing," he said hastily, as he subsided. "I just thought of something I'd—I'd forgotten—but it's of no importance. Yes, you were saying you'd go on Tuesday, Priscilla. Well, all right, all right."

Left alone, the weakened little figure in the wicker chair sat up and slumped it right, less smartly thrice.

"I'll do it," said Stephen, excitedly. "I'll do it! She'll never know. I'll come back Tuesday night."

"He was silent for a minute, then added, explosively:

"I am dog-gasted sick of the town!"

Early Tuesday morning he went to the station with his horse and saw her off on the St. Andrew's flyer. His own train did not leave until later. It landed him at Roseneath station in the mid-morning.

Roseneath proper was three miles from the station, and Stephen started to walk it, over the long, moist road that wound and twisted up to the wooded hills, through the young green saplings.

He stood with his arms on the yard gate, feasting his eyes on the gray buildings and gardens. There was a lonely, deserted look about the place that hurt him, but it was home. He would spend the whole afternoon here. He would go over the farm in its length and breadth and visit every field and nook.

He was down on his knees by the day-lily plot when he heard the eastern stage swing back with its old peculiar creak. Stephen hastily got upon his feet. A woman was coming through it. "I'll be dog-gasted if it 'tain't Priscilla," he said, helplessly.

Priscilla it was. She did not see Stephen until she came round the last cherry tree on the path.

"Father!" she exclaimed.

They stood and looked at each other in silence for a few moments. Stephen's brain worked in a succession of jerks. He had begun to understand things before Priscilla had recovered herself.

"Priscilla, Priscilla," he said, solemnly, but with a twinkle in his mild eyes. "Where are the mothers?"

"Where are the mothers?"

"They're at St. Andrew's, no doubt, father. You know I didn't tell you I was going there. I just said the council met there and I was appointed one of the delegates. I never meant to go. I meant to come here, but I couldn't bear to admit to you that I was so crazy for Roseneath that I had to start off mud and mire for it. And after all our talk last fall, too! How did you find out I came here?"

"I didn't know you did come," he answered. "I thought you were safe in St. Andrew's. I came on my own account, because I was so homesick I couldn't stand it a day longer, and because I was literally dying to get out of sight and sound of that town, if only for a day."

"Why, father," said Priscilla, in astonishment, "you don't mean to say that you are not contented in town?"

Why, you seemed so interested in everything—I thought you were just as happy as you expected to be!"

"All put on, Priscilla—all put on," said Stephen. "I've hated it—hated it—goodness, what a relief it is to say it at last! But I wouldn't let on for the world for fear you'd laugh at me and say I told you so, for all my brag. I didn't think you were homesick for Roseneath. You seemed so taken up with everything in town and as busy and happy as if you were just in the place that fitted you."

"Oh, I just pretended, to hide the truth from you," cried Priscilla. "I—I—couldn't bear to admit how disappointed I was after being so sure of myself. I wanted to be back here. Why, father, I missed the loneliness of it! I just wanted to feel lonely again, with all my heart. And the worst of it was, it came between us. I was determined you should not suspect what I felt like. I don't care now, when you're feeling the same way. So I came out today, I brought a bunch with me, and I meant to stay all night at the Hendersons. I've been all over the farm already. I wish I'd never left it—we were old fools to run after raw things at our time of life. Good as they are, it's too late."

"We can come back, Priscilla," said Stephen, eagerly.

"Oh, if we only could!" cried Priscilla. "The children—"

"Never mind the children! See here, Priscilla. It's not going to do them any good for us to be miserable. They'll be willing enough to let us come when they find out how we feel. And we'll come, whether or no. We're our own bosses yet, I guess. Priscilla, we'll move out as soon as come good roads. Won't them Shackelfords cackle with delight over my back-down? But I don't care a mite since you're in it, too. I can just snap my fingers at the whole world."

He laughed squally with joy. Priscilla smiled and drew a long breath.

Many a Hopkinsville Citizen Knows How Sure They Are.

Nothing uncertain about Doan's Kidney Pills in Hopkinsville. There's plenty of positive proof of this. Such evidence should convince the most skeptical sufferer. Read the following statement:

L. R. Woolfolk, 427 South Main Street, Madisonville, Ky., says: "I highly recommend Doan's Kidney Pills as being a reliable remedy for he kidneys. I have tested them thoroughly during the past two years and they do exactly what is claimed for them. I have had severe attacks of backache during the past two years. Often when I sat down and went to get up, sharp twinges of pain caught me in the back. I also suffered in the morning so it was almost impossible for me to stoop over to put my shoes on. When these attacks were at their height, I was induced to try Doan's Kidney Pills through reading the statements of parties here in town. They gave me relief from the first, and soon cured the attacks. Since then, whenever I feel any symptoms of a recurrence, I resort to the use of Doan's Kidney Pills and they have never failed to ward off the trouble. When away on my trips, I carry a box with me, and I take a few doses now and then to keep the kidneys in good condition. Doan's Kidney Pills is the best Kidney remedy I ever used, and I cheerfully give them my endorsement."

Everything Ready For The Appearance of Warde.

A large crowd will greet Frederick Warde at the tabernacle tomorrow night. Manager McPherson has been busy all the week, the auditorium having been put in proper condition. The people realize what a treat is in store for them; arrangements for giving the school children an opportunity of hearing the great tragedian; the Elks and Knights of Pythias have spoken for big blocks of seats, and everything cooks propitiously.

There is no man on the platform today who is higher spoken in his line than Mr. Warde and no one is better fitted than he to entertain the intelligent crowd that will hear him tomorrow night.

To Save Marble Buildings.

It has been estimated that the combustion of coal in London discharges at least half a million tons of sulphuric acid into the air each year, and the effect upon certain building stones is disastrous. The acid washed down by rains attacks the lime of marbles, limestones and calcareous sandstones, forming gypsum and causing the surface to swell and crumble. A treatment for the decaying stonework is the application of solution of baryta, which forms an insoluble sulphate with the gypsum and liberates lime, the carbonate acid of the air converts into the original binding cement of the stone. Referring to an experience at the Chapter house at Westminster, Prof. A. H. Church says that carving so soft as to be brought away by the finger was made sound and harder than the newly quarried stone.

Justice for Wives.

A bill to give married women the control of their own earnings in France has reached the stage of the second reading. As things are now, if a married woman earns a dollar by taking in washing, or thousands of dollars by writing a successful novel, every cent of it belongs to her husband. If she secures the money and puts it in the bank, she cannot draw it out without his written consent, but he can draw it out without hers and spend it as he pleases. For 14 years women have been working to get this law changed.

Royal Spats.

We read in an ancient chronicle that when a letter not altogether courteous was sent to the emperor of Japan by the emperor of China, the mikado opened his answer thus: "The emperor of the land where the sun rises addresses himself to the emperor of the land where the sun sets." On another occasion, when the Chinese emperor had the audacity to demand the submission of Japan, that spirited country chopped off the heads of the luckless ambassadors.

CONVENTION TO BEGIN

Many Speakers for the State Development Meeting.

The programme for the coming sixth state development convention which will be held in Louisville on November 18 is nearly ready for publication, and it already bears the names of some of the foremost men of Kentucky, and the United States.

Realizing the foremost place the press of Kentucky has always had in the progress of the state, the committee on programme has asked Lewis B. Brown, president of the Kentucky Press association to deliver an address on "The Influence of the Press on State Development." Mr. Brown consented to take the time from his business to make this address, and has promised to co-operate with the association in this great work.

About twenty men of national reputation will be on the programme altogether. The Hon. Jas. B. McCreary will take the Panama Canal for his subject, and will treat of the economical relation of the canal to the progress and prosperity of the southern states.

Forestry reserve, in its relation to Kentucky, particularly, will be the subject taken by Wm. L. Hall, of the United States forestry service. Mr. Hall has conducted many important investigations for the service, and his opinions on Kentucky timber matters should be very highly valued by Kentuckians.

Space forbids the individual mention of all speakers, but the programme committee is of the opinion that the strongest array yet offered has been secured for the coming meeting. Kentuckians, whether delegates or not, should attend the convention, and get in touch with this important movement.

A number of Hopkinsville people are preparing to attend the convention.

"The Great White Plague."

Not since the world began has any single cause of death taken so many human lives as tuberculosis or consumption. Year by year one-seventh of those who die in most civilized lands give up their lives to the great white plague. The long roll of brave men killed in battle on both sides in the entire four years' struggle between the states does not equal the yearly harvest of men, women and children taken off by consumption. In view of these figures no more valuable feature of the Jamestown Exposition will be found than the American Tuberculosis Exhibition which is shown in the Social Economy building under the auspices of the National Association for the study and prevention of tuberculosis. This exhibit is interesting to all, for all are interested. Any and every home may be subject to the ravages of this disease. It should be understood, also, that the exhibit is absolutely free from any unpleasant feature. It is not a "medical museum," nor is it a collection of horrors.

The exhibit includes an interesting collection of pictures showing the conditions of life which make tuberculosis easily possible. Photographs from Washington City and Virginia account for the high death rate among the colored races in America. Rarely attractive pictures illustrating the outdoor life, which is essential in the treatment of consumption, and models of tents, buildings and window tents make plain the possibility of living out of doors either at home or in some institution especially equipped for the purpose.

Before reaching the exposition 100,000 boys and girls, and 100,000 adults had visited this exhibit in the principal cities of Mexico, Canada and the United States. Daily reception takes absolutely free from any unpleasant feature are given at 3 p. m. in the lecture hall of the Social Economy Building.

From Jamestown this exhibition goes to Louisville, Nashville Atlanta and Richmond.

KILL THE SUCKERS.

Says Government Expert A. C. Morgan.

A. C. Morgan, a government expert who was sent here to study tobacco with headquarters at Clarksville, urges the farmers to destroy the suckers after their tobacco has been cut. He studied a field in which the suckers were allowed to grow and he found that these afforded an excellent breeding and feeding place for the worms and that at the approach of frost they went into the ground. Later on when this ground was spaded up they were found, in great numbers, which of course, foreshadowed the crop of worms for next season. The expert claims that if these suckers are not allowed to grow in this manner that the quantity of worms will be greatly lessened.

The plan of keeping the worms killed out by spraying the tobacco plants with paris green was also very thoroughly investigated. Mr. Morgan said that this afforded a temporary relief but that he thought the farmers should try to get at the root of the trouble and by breaking up the breeding of the worms permanently rid their farms of them.

THE OLDEST BAPTIST PREACHER BUT ONE IN STATE OF KENTUCKY

The Rev. James U. Spurlin, Whose Services in The Ministry Cover a Period of 63 Years.

Almost every week can be seen upon the streets of Hopkinsville a tall and erect old man, a very patriarch in appearance. Although he carries the weight of more than 83 years, he is still strong and well preserved and in the full possession of all his faculties. With the exception of Rev. Green, who lives in one of the Purchase counties, who is 87 years old, he is the oldest Baptist preacher in Kentucky, Rev. James Utley Spurlin, of this county.

Mr. Spurlin was born in the Bluff Spring district of this county, May 3, 1824. He was the third son of John and Rebecca (Utley) Spurlin, who sprang from two pioneer families of Kentucky. He was reared in the neighborhood where he was born, receiving but little education, as the schools of that day were very poor. His mother, however, was a woman of gentle birth and a fair education and she taught him more than he learned in the district school. When he was 19 years of age he was converted in a protracted meeting at Pleasant Hill church, under the preaching of a young man only 24 years of age, who had entered the ministry from the same church. This young man was Rev. A. W. Meacham, who at the conclusion of the revival Mr. Spurlin was one of the converts baptized by him in a stream near the church, August 11, 1843. This little Baptist church among the hills of Pond River, at the period of which we are writing, ordained four of its young men to the ministry whose combined service in the pulpit amounted to more than 200 years; and they baptized in that time more than 12,000 persons.

These young men, Rev. Nicholas Lacy, who died two years ago in Madisonville, Ky., Rev. A. W. Meacham, who died five years ago at Gracery, Ky., Rev. Calvin Meacham, who died about the same time, and the subject of this sketch.

Mr. Spurlin, as soon as he united with the church, began preparing himself for the ministry and was licensed to preach in 1848, two months before he was 24 years old. Almost immediately thereafter he preached his first sermon at Cave Spring church, which resulted in his being called to the pastorate of the church. From that day to this, covering a period of nearly 63 years, Mr. Spurlin has been almost constantly in the pulpit and has made himself a power for good all over this and surrounding counties. He has preached to many churches, among them Cave Spring and three other churches in Muhlenberg county; Pleasant Hill, Macedonia, New Barren Springs, Little River and Sinking Fork in Christian; Mt. Moriah and Armageddon in Todd; Hurricane Creek, Donaldson Creek, and Cerulean Springs in Trigg; Liberty in Hopkins; Pleasant Grove, Harmony and Lebanon in Caldwell; Cherry Hill in Henderson and Big Rock in Stewart county, Tenn. To Sinking Fork church he preached without interruption for 40 years. He made his home near this church, where he still lives with one of his sons. Mr. Spurlin does not know the exact number of people he has baptized but he estimates them at 5,000. He has established a number of new churches and has preached an average of 100 sermons a year, a total of probably 7000. He has joined about 1000 couples in marriage. The work he began 63 years ago is being carried on by one of his sons and one of his grandsons. These are Rev. John H. Spurlin, of Sturgis, his son, who has been preaching for nearly 30 years and has himself baptized probably 1000 or 2000 persons already, and Rev. Lindson Spurlin, of this city, a son of Alfred Spurlin, who is now pastor of Little River church, a church that his grandfather once preached to and of which Rev. A. W. Meacham was pastor for 26 years. Mr. Spurlin has been twice married and is now a widower. His first wife was Miss Linnie Meacham, a daughter of Edmund Meacham, and their children still living are three sons and one daughter, Mrs. Higgins, of Mayfield. His second wife was Miss Minerva Robinson and from this union one son resulted, William Lucian Spurlin, now in the government service in the Philippines. This venerable man of God is in many respects a remarkable man. His towering form and physical strength, even in his old age, attract attention. His long gray beard and keen eyes remind us of the patriarch Moses, who when he died at 120 years of age, still had an eye "undimmed by age."

When he speaks, his clear, strong voice and wonderful command of words impress themselves upon all who hear him. Though his education is meager, his language, from careful study and long contact with the ablest men of his denomination, is surprisingly free from grammatical errors. His store of information and his knowledge of the Bible make him always ready. He never writes his sermons, but takes a text and preaches until he thinks the proper time has come for him to stop. His manner of delivery is earnest and sonorous and as he warms to his subject is fervid, powerful and often eloquent. In the rural districts where his life work has been done, he is regarded as one of the powerful preachers of his denomination. Certainly he has been successful to a degree seldom attained by any man in a field limited to 50 miles from where he was born.

Brother Spurlin, as everybody calls him, is not now a pastor, but he preaches somewhere every month and he is never happier than when in the midst of a pastoral meeting. All three of the friends of his boyhood who began preaching in the same decade he did have passed away. In 1897 the four old veterans in the Lord's service held a reunion at the old church that ordained them all, and it was a great time for them. It came none too soon, for all four of them never met again. The next year they attempted to meet again but one of them was dead, one was sick and only two of them were there. The next year only Bro. Spurlin was able to visit the old church. He still makes occasional visits and is dearly beloved by the people, the descendants of his old-time friends. Ripe in years, loved and respected by all who knew him, the old preacher, whose whole long life has been devoted to the service of his Master, is calmly, fearlessly and confidently awaiting the summons from above.

Kentucky's Oldest Man Dead

Barbourville, Ky., Nov. 12.—A telephone message states that Elijah Miles, considered the oldest man in Kentucky, died at his home near Artemus, this county, at the age of 109. Death was due to the infirmities incident to old age. Mr. Miles, until a few years before his death frequently walked from his home to this city, a distance of four miles. He was born in Whitley county, adjoining Knox, but lived the greater part of his life in this county, rarely leaving his home. He leaves a host of relatives in this section of Kentucky.
